

March 11, 2008

Green pages on convention Web site

The Democratic National Convention Committee launched a series of "green" pages on its Web site today.

The new content -- at www.DemConvention.com -- highlights the DNCC's efforts to design waste out of the four-day convention and during the months leading up to it.

The site features a carbon calculator to help convention guests measure their carbon footprint traveling to Denver.

Additional components of the new green pages include an overview of the DNCC's sustainable goals and objectives, a weekly "greening" tip, and behind-the-scenes "Green Screen" video of the committee's environmental efforts.

The convention will be held at the Pepsi Center Aug. 25 to Aug. 28.